CITY'S HEALTH FINE WITH EXCEPTION OF PARALYSIS PLAGUE

Fewer Cases of Measles and Other Diseases Peculiar to Hot Season.

Figures compiled by the Department of Health and made public today indicate that infantile paralysis is the only disease epidemic in the city at this time. Records for the summer thus far show that there have been two cases of measles and other summer complaints of children than in previous years.

The extent of the present spread of infantile paralysis is illustrated in the record of cases and deaths due to infantile paralysis in the past three years. In 1913 there were 319 cases and 55 deaths; in 1914 there were 329 cases and 54 deaths, and in 1915 35 cases and 35 deaths were reported. The last estimate of the present epidemic made yesterday morning showed that 3,443 cases and 287 deaths had been reported at that time.

There was an unusual increase in the number of cases this year during the first five months. Daily case reports were reported in that time. About the middle of June, the first increase started in Brooklyn and the record for Brooklyn alone in June was brought up to 27 cases, with 231 on the city.

Last year 3,111 cases of measles were reported, with a death record of 50. This number was in excess of that when 2,794 cases were reported. Just 1,827 cases have been reported this year and it is expected that the record will be much less than last year. Summer complaints, the most prevalent of children's diseases, claimed 3,443 victims in 1914 and 3,111 in 1915. Health Commissioner Emerson said that the record for this year will be less.

Of the twenty deaths from infantile paralysis in 1915 four of the victims were adults. Of fifty-five in 1914 four were adults, and of thirty-four in 1913 but one was more than ten years old. Three adults were among the thirteen who died last year.

PARALYSIS CASES SHOW APPRECIABLE FALLING-OFF TO-DAY

minor, expressed great satisfaction today when Dr. John B. Billings, who has been ill for ten days, returned to work and was placed in charge of the Brooklyn situation.

"Dr. Billings is by all odds the best trained official in the Department of Health," said the Commissioner.

For twenty-one years Dr. Billings has been connected with the New York Health Department. He took part in fighting the infantile paralysis epidemic of 1907 and has come to be a recognized expert on preventable diseases.

Persons desiring to take children out of the city for the week-end are advised by Commissioner Emerson to visit the Health Department offices and procure "health passports," showing that they are not from infected districts. These will aid them in districts where a quarantine on New York children has been imposed.

Thirty new doctors were added to the investigating force in Brooklyn this morning, making forty-eight in all. They were started out to look into the 298 suspected cases reported in Brooklyn in the last twenty-four hours. It is anticipated that the usual small proportion of these will prove to be true cases of infantile paralysis.

The big fact that came out of the infantile paralysis situation to-day was the official warning: "Don't get scared!"

From public health officials in Washington, as well as from local experts were issued what amounted to rebukes to the panic-stricken, whether commonwealths or individuals.

In Washington, the Federal authorities discussed the whole situation. "There is no occasion for a general quarantine of New York City," they decided, and the local warning was perhaps best expressed by Dr. J. P. Leake, one of the Government surgeons, who said: "Mothers should not rush madly out of town. Their children may be safer here. There is no doubt the New York Health Board is able to cope with the situation. People seem to forget the case rate here is less than thirty in 100,000—less than three one-hundredths of one per cent."

Features of the campaign to-day are a conference between health officials and railroad men with a view to keeping track of persons fleeing from infected districts, and a meeting at the Academy of Medicine to-night for medical men only, at which all that is known of infantile paralysis will be discussed by experts.

At the request of the health officers of the places in question, the Health Department is now sending copies of its lists of new cases to Yonkers, Hoboken, Jersey City, Newark, Orange, Trenton, Philadelphia, Bridgeport, Waterbury, South Norwalk, Boston, Albany, Buffalo, Brockton, Mass., Fall River, Chicago, Syracuse and Patterson.

Acting at the request of the Health Commissioner, Deputy Commissioner Scull of the Police Department gave instructions last night that no permits are to be issued for children to parade in the celebration of the Feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel next Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Following a conference of the directors of the National Daily Vacation Bible School Association, it was announced that all the schools in the five boroughs will be closed this morning. Several thousand children will be affected.

The excursion of the Advocates, Holy Spirit and St. Mary's Churches of the Bronx, scheduled for to-morrow, has been cancelled.
